Aberdeen Standard Actively Hedged International Equities Fund

01 Moving away from home

- Australia has over 2,200 listed stocks, a small number compared to over 48,000 stocks listed globally¹.
- Investing solely in Australia leaves investors very exposed to the fortunes of the Financials sector.
- Investing offshore offers potential gains from some of the world's strongest companies - in industries under-represented in Australia, e.g. healthcare and technology.

02 Why diversify?

- Over time stock market fluctuations have demonstrated how important it is to avoid over-exposure to a single company, industry or market, as none will give consistently strong performance.
- Spreading investments across stocks, industries and regions, mitigates risk and optimises the potential for positive performance.
- Global diversification can reduce the overall volatility of a portfolio and smooth out returns.

03 Why invest in a managed fund?

- It's hard to navigate the vast, complex universe of global equities due to the sheer number of stocks.
- Investors may be unfamiliar with the companies, or the complexities, of overseas markets. For example local accounting practices and corporate governance standards can differ markedly.
- Successful overseas investing requires a long-term commitment. Funds offer access to expert investors with global research capabilities and proven stock selection skills.
- Global markets don't always move in unison. A fund manager can target those markets that show the most promise and avoid the worst prospects.

04 Currency management

- Currency movements can impact returns and increase volatility in a portfolio. This can work for or against the investor.
- An Australian who invests in global equities effectively holds overseas assets in a foreign currency. This exposes them to the risks of a fluctuating Australian dollar. While they will benefit when the Australian dollar falls against the currencies of the foreign assets held, they will lose money when the Australian dollar rises and the value of those overseas assets falls in Australian dollar terms.
- Foreign currency hedging effectively removes the effects of a fluctuating Australian dollar, aiming to provide less volatile returns that reflect the movement of the underlying assets (companies) rather than currency movements.
- The Aberdeen Standard Actively Hedged International Equities Fund aims to hedge 0-50% of its foreign currency exposure.
